

MASTER'S PROGRAM • 2 YEARS • TAUGHT IN ENGLISH

International Migration & Global Social Change

This interdisciplinary master's program explores global migration trends, policies, and their social impact. It combines sociology, political science, economics, and law to equip students with analytical and research skills essential for understanding and managing migration-related challenges.

Our graduates are prepared for careers in international organizations, NGOs, public institutions, and academic research — shaping the policies that define how the world responds to human mobility.
